TERFEBENCE.

The south, said Mr. Ingalls, evidently intended to deprive the negroes of their vote and of their independence, and practically the north has acquiesced in this. Attempts had been made to pass civil rights laws and federal dition of oleo oil or lard to election laws, but they had failed. The negro had been abandoned by the north. But he wished to warn the people of the south that the north, the west, the east would not allow their commerce, their manufactures and their social condition to be modified by executive and congressional majorities obtained by the suppression of the colored vote or any other vote. No one could tell how long this patient endurance of the north would continue, but that the crisis would come, in peace or in blood, was the inexorable decree of fate. this condition of affairs continued nothing could avert water, which is generally admitted to be harmless, is the most commonly used. He emphawhen he stabbed his victim. The south should sized the evil results arising from the watering of milk owing to the fact that this staple forms the principal diet of our infant population up to the age of a year, and it is easily conceivable that a young child might starve to death on adulterated cow's milk. In all large cities the health department should take every means to itself with heavier manacles than those with skimmed milk,

QUEER PREJUDICES.

He discussed quite a number of other adulterants and also told of some queer prejudices existing among various peoples, going to show that what is one man's meat may be another's poison. He spoke of the possibilities of limiting food adulteration by legislation, but showed also the difficulties of the task. "The average American," Mr. Richards said, "would regard with apathy any general law that would guar-antee to the public the liberty of purchasing were not imposed upon in their purchase, if it was incumbent to bring samples for

MAY DIE OF STARVATION.

Destitute Indians on Wisconsin Reserve vations in Danger of Death. News has recently reached this city of the existence of greatest destitution among the Indians on the Wisconsin reservations. Agent Leahy, who has a number of starving Indians under his care, lately said that unless something was done and done soon to relieve their needs the government may have to provide for the burial of many who must die of sheer starvation. Court d'Orielles reservation seems to be the most needy, though there are other

The Stoddard Lecture Tick et Sale To the Editor of THE EVENING STAR:

In reply to Mr. Bayly's communication in yesterday's STAR permit me to say that he is ertainly in error as to the purchase of the Stoddard lecture tickets by speculators, as I saw two different parties offering them for sale in the patent office before 11 o'clock Tuesday in the patent office before 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. The asking price was $4, but I saw some sold at $3.50. I heard one young man say that he and another person had purchased $250 worth of the best seats in the gallery and that they had agreed to hold them at $4. Of course these tickets were purchased by means of the "written order" racket, which should be abolished in future, or all pretense of preventing speculators from buying up most of the best seats should be abandoned.
